

You can influence how we recover from Hurricane Sandy.

On February 3, 2014 New Jersey released a draft Action Plan for spending $1.5 billion in federal funds to help with recovery from Hurricane Sandy. The state is accepting comments about the plan for 30 days.

Will you get the help you need? Will funds go to those who need it the most? Will we move toward safety and sustainability or recreate the problems that allowed so much damage to happen?

New Jerseyans, especially those affected by the storm, have a lot at stake. We have one chance to get it right.

The Citizens Campaign is hosting a webinar/conference call this Friday, February 7 at 1pm. Leading policy experts will explain what is in the plan and how you can be more effective in crafting your own testimony.

Show up.

Testify. Send a letter or email.

New Jersey is required by federal law to listen to your views and answer your questions. But you have to show up and testify, or send a letter or email.
